Zeb Tsikira was born in a small village in Zimbabwe in 1984. From a young age, he showed a natural talent for football. But his path to success was not easy. He faced poverty, discrimination, and injury. But through it all, Tsikira never gave up on his dream of playing professional football.

In 2002, Tsikira was scouted by a South African club. He moved to South Africa and began his professional career. But his time in South Africa was not easy. He faced racism and discrimination from both his teammates and opponents. But Tsikira refused to let this stop him. He continued to work hard and eventually became one of the most successful players in the South African Premier Division.

In 2008, Tsikira was called up to the Zimbabwe national team. He made his debut in a friendly match against Namibia. Tsikira quickly became a regular in the national team and helped Zimbabwe qualify for the 2010 FIFA World Cup. The World Cup was a dream come true for Tsikira. He played in all three of Zimbabwe's matches and helped his team reach the knockout stages.

After the World Cup, Tsikira moved to Europe to play for a club in the English Premier League. He spent two seasons in England before returning to South Africa to play for his former club. Tsikira retired from professional football in 2018. He is now a coach and mentor to young footballers.

All or Nothing is the gripping tale of Zeb Tsikira's journey from a small village in Zimbabwe to the world stage. It is a story of adversity, determination, and triumph. Tsikira's story is an inspiration to anyone who has ever dreamed of achieving their goals.
