One Axiom that is particularly relevant for leaders today is: "Leadership without integrity is deception." Busia believed that ethical conduct is essential for effective leadership, and that leaders should always act with honesty, transparency, and fairness.

Axioms for Nation-Building

Busia was deeply committed to the development and prosperity of Africa. He believed that African nations could achieve greatness by embracing their own values and traditions, while also learning from the best practices of other cultures.

One of Busia's Axioms that is particularly relevant for nation-building is: "A nation's greatness lies in the unity of its people." He believed that diversity can be a source of strength, but only if the people of a nation are united by a common vision and purpose.
