If so, then you need to read this article.

I'm going to share with you a revolutionary method that's helping thousands of bad golfers break 90 all the time.

The Secret Weapon

The secret weapon is simple: play to your strengths.

If you're a short hitter, then you need to accept that you're not going to be able to out-drive your opponents.

But that doesn't mean you can't beat them.

In fact, you can actually use your short hitting to your advantage.

Here's how:

- Play to your strengths. Focus on hitting the ball straight and in the fairway.
- Avoid big misses. Don't try to hit hero shots. Just play smart and keep the ball in play.
- Take advantage of your short game. You may not be able to hit the ball far, but you can still make up for it with your short game.
- Putt well. Putting is the most important part of the game for short hitters.

The 5-Step Method

Here's a 5-step method that you can use to break 90:

1. Set realistic goals. Don't try to break 90 overnight. Start by setting small goals, such as breaking 100 or 95.
2. Practice the right things. Don't waste your time practicing things that you're not good at. Focus on practicing the things that will help you break 90, such as your short game and putting.
3. Play more rounds. The more rounds you play, the better you will become at managing your game and making smart decisions.
4. Learn from your mistakes. Everyone makes mistakes on the golf course. The key is to learn from your mistakes and avoid making them again.

5. Don't give up. Breaking 90 is a challenge, but it's definitely possible. If you stay patient and keep working at it, you will eventually achieve your goal.

If you're a short hitter, don't despair. You can still break 90 all the time.

Just follow the tips in this article, and you'll be on your way to shooting your best scores ever.

So what are you waiting for? Start practicing today!
