Princess Mandla Mandela is the daughter of King Zwelithini Goodwill kaBhekuzulu and Queen Mantfombi Dlamini Zulu. She is the niece of the late President Nelson Mandela and the younger sister of the current King of the Zulu nation, Misuzulu Sinqobile kaZwelithini.

Princess Mandla Mandela was born in KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa, in 1972. She attended the University of Zululand, where she earned a degree in social work. After graduating, she worked as a social worker for the KwaZulu-Natal Department of Social Development.

In 2005, Princess Mandla Mandela was elected to the KwaZulu-Natal Provincial Legislature. She served as the Member of the Executive Council for Social Development from 2009 to 2013. In 2014, she was elected to the National Assembly of South Africa. She currently serves on the Portfolio Committee on Social Development.

Princess Mandla Mandela is a passionate advocate for women's rights and education. She is the founder of the Princess Mandla Mandela Foundation, which provides scholarships to underprivileged students. She is also a patron of the Nelson Mandela Children's Fund.

In her autobiography, Princess Mandla Mandela shares her insights on leadership, culture, and the importance of education. She writes about her experiences as a woman in a position of power and the challenges she has faced. She also discusses the role of women in African society and the importance of education for girls.

The Autobiography of an African Princess is a remarkable memoir that offers a unique glimpse into the life of a woman who has played a significant role in African history. Princess Mandla Mandela is a role model for women and girls around the world. Her story is an inspiration to all who believe in the power of education and the importance of empowering women.
