One of the most important figures in the early history of skiing is Sondre Norheim. Born in 1825, Norheim is credited with inventing the Telemark ski technique, which is still used by skiers today. He also played a key role in the development of ski jumping and cross-country skiing.

In 1892, the first ski club was founded in Norway, and the sport quickly began to spread throughout the world. By the early 20th century, skiing was a popular sport in Europe and North America, and the first Winter Olympics were held in 1924.
